

At the start of this oral class, Ss discussed with the teacher. It was nice talking with students and finding out that Joyce is doing a Bachelors in finance, and hoping to move to Canada in August. The other classmate, Conoha, will be doing a bachelor of arts in literature. The class was short, but student comprehension of audio recordings was exercised. via the completion of a fill in the blank digital document on sleep as well as a Kahoot on happiness. Obviously, there was discussion of the subject matter that enveloped these two materials, including a class workbook. It was difficult to help the students simply due to this environment being still new territory of observation, but also because the material wasn't reviewed by myself in advance. Therefore, the most important part of this reflection is that observers should familiarize themselves with the course material prior to class, even though they aren't there in a teaching role per-se.

Upon further reflection, this class was very different from any other one I observed because it used coursebook materials. For that reason the change of pace was quite nice, although it may not have been a change for the students that attend this class regularly.
